California Electrical Code

Sponsored by CALBO Training Institute

This full-day course is designed to illustrate the numerous changes to the 2010 California Electrical Code with an interactive approach. The material presented is intended to help participants understand the provisions and provide the background and intent of the significant changes in order to make subjective decisions on a case-by-case basis. Included in the changes are four entirely new articles, (one of which is literally titled COPS), major changes to both arc-fault and ground-fault compliance, new solar photovoltaic requirements, and for the first time ever, compliance requirements for the controversial tamper-resistant receptacles. Also illustrated will be significant changes to the equipotential bonding grid for swimming pools and the new requirements for bonding communication circuits. This course applies toward the Code Enforcement, Counter Technician, and Field Inspector Credentials.
